An innovative workshop was held by Ahmedabad University. Here the trick of solving a problem from its base, then changing the concept and again connecting to it the problem was taught. It is aptly said “A problem can never be solved in the content in which it arose”. Kees Drosht gave a brief knowledge how to frame a problem by giving example of Sydney opera house. Five trainees along with Dr. K.H.Yadav of A.G.Teachers College participated in the workshop. The participants were divided into two parts. They had to work on the problem of “Traffic in Ahmedabad”. One group worked on the social causes of problem while the other worked on base of the problem.

The final conclusion was held in the form of “as if” the cause of the problem. Each group was individually guided by the coordinators. The overall theme of the workshop was concluded successfully.
